

Trusted resources to learn more about your ultrasound

The Internet is a great resource for you to learn more about your ultrasound findings. We've put together a list of suggested and trusted web sites for you to visit and learn more. For questions and additional information, please do not hesitate to contact our office at (515) 643-6888.

Your baby has: _____

Birth Defects and Genetic Disorders

cdc.gov/ncbddd/bd

CDC birth defects information site.

geneclinics.org

A large database offering in-depth explanations of genetic disorders written by experts.

rarediseases.org

Includes information about various rare diseases.

otispregnancy.org

Information about exposures during pregnancy, such as infections, environment, medications, etc.

<http://mydoctor.kaiserpermanente.org/ncal/specialty/genetics>

handouts on various conditions and ultrasound findings. Includes Chinese versions of some handouts.

ghr.nlm.nih.gov

Genetics Home Reference includes consumer-friendly information about genetic conditions.

rarechromo.org

Information about many chromosomal alterations and support/family contacts.

Support Groups

www.geneticalliance.org

Information and links to support organizations for various disorders.

How to Find Reliable Medical Information

If you are doing your own online searches, here are some web sites that can help you determine if it is reliable information.

mlanet.org/resources/userguide.html
trustortrash.org

Medical Terminology

mlanet.org/resources/medspeak/medspeaka_d.html

Resursosos en Espanol

nacersano.org

Version en Espanol de la pagina March of Dimes

otispregnancy.org

Informacion de las exposiciones durante el embarazo tales como infecciones, ambientales, medicamentos, etc.

<http://mydoctor.kaiserpermanente.org/ncal/specialty/genetics>

Folletos de varias condiciones y descumbrimientos con ultrasonido. Algunos folletos incluyen la version en Espanol y chino.