Lori Skiff Memorial Nursing Scholarship

Lori Skiff packed a lot of compassion, inspiration and enthusiasm into her 26 years. Lori was the kind of nurse her patients remembered, asked for, and told their families about.

Lori, who passed away in the summer of 1988, was the kind of nurse who would stay past her shift just to visit with her patients when they awakened.

Her patient's comfort was her top priority. Hospital officials rewarded her for excellent patient relations at Jane Lamb Health Center with a special award called C.A.R.E., in 1987.

In the spring, she was hospitalized in the same intensive care unit where she worked at Jane Lamb. She had contracted non-A, non-B hepatitis. She underwent two liver transplants but died July 12 shortly after the second operation. Precisely how she contracted hepatitis may never be known, hospital officials and her mother say. After her death, a liver specialist at University Hospitals, Iowa City, wrote to Lori's mother, Arthera: "She has the most unfortunate and devastating illness, but she fought with bravery and tenacity long after many patients would of quit."

Earning her Bachelor of Science degree in nursing at Marycrest College was important to Lori, who juggled her job with studies and the regular commute to Davenport. She inspired her co-workers, urging them to continue their education. She was more than half way through her studies when she died, and Marycrest awarded Lori her diploma posthumously in December. The diploma was "an honor for someone like this," Dr. Dolores Hilden, chairwoman of Marycrest Nursing division, said. Lori's co-workers, friends and family have established this scholarship memorial fund in her honor.
